

Bipolar II

Research conducted by the Black Dog Institute indicates that up to 6% of the Australian population may have bipolar II.

While the depressive episodes may be as severe as in bipolar I, the mood elevation states are not as extreme and this unexpected combination can lead to a failure to detect this condition.

Dr. Mark Rowe FRANZCP, Clinical Director of The Lawson Clinic, will give practical guidance as to 'how not to miss this diagnosis' and shall outline current management strategies in tackling this silent epidemic in Australian society.
